

How to get books during a pandemic

Library

First, we recommend checking your local library for books you are interested in reading. Library currently closed? No problem! Most libraries offer a wealth of online resources, such as ebooks and audiobooks. Download the Overdrive or Libby apps, log in with your library card, and start reading!

Local book stores

If you don't have a library card or are unable to get the book you need from the library, we recommend checking out your local bookstore. If they aren't open to the public, many are offering curbside pickup or shipping. Give them a call and ask!

Local book stores

If the above options don't work for you, there are many places you can purchase books online. Here is a short list of companies based on the west coast, but there are many others!

- Thriftbooks
- Powell's City of Books
- Amazon
